SALLY, the Human Horse

In

A DARK HORSE

Sally is the faithful valet of Charlie, a tenderfoot in the wild and wooly West. Sally gets up and awakes Charlie by simply throwing water in his face. After that, though, he repents and dusts Charlie's hat and suit with his trusty tail.

Together they enter a town where the occupants are most friendly - with fights and gun-play and general all-around scrimmages. It is here that the bad gambler see Charlie's fat bank roll, and suggests they have a friendly "no limit" game of poker. Charlie assents, but begins losing heavily. Sally, who had seen the gambler draw four aces out of his boot, warns his master, and Charlie endeavors to win by the same methods. So he goes outside and places all the important cards on a fence and tells Sally just what to get when the proper time arrives. So, with the aid of Sally Charlie begins winning back his losses.

However, Sally deserts the ranks when ^{he sees} a young lady in distress, when a bold man of the West kisses her. So, eventually, Charlie loses everything, and they throw him out of the saloon.

In the end Sally cleans out the place for his master, and together they ride into the home of the sweet young Ena Gregory's cabin - to eternal bliss.
